Integrated Security Group Attending Northeast Colleges and Security Association 56th Annual Conference Mystic, Connecticut June 14-17

MERIDEN, CT (June 5, 2009)... Integrated Security Group (ISG) – a leading provider of security and life safety solutions for business and government, and their employees and executives at home – will be attending the 56th Annual NECUSA conference in Mystic, Connecticut between June 14-17, 2009.

The Northeast Colleges and Universities Security Association (NECUSA), established in 1953, is the oldest campus law enforcement organization in the United States. Originally intended to be a small group of campus security and police professionals coming together to share information on issues facing their campuses, the organization grew from eight loosely organized members to an organization over 400 members strong.

ISG recently became a member of NECUSA in order to contribute information from a provider prospective with the goal of supporting the mission of the association in order to collectively tackle the issues surrounding modern day campus security threats.

“We want to join the conversation and share our experience and information. If we’re sharing information and listening and learning from others, then collectively we’re all in a better position to address emerging security and life safety threats,” noted John McKenna, Vice President of ISG.

The 56th annual conference will be held from June 14-17 at the Mystic Marriot in Groton, CT. This year’s conference will be co-hosted by Western Connecticut State University, Danbury, CT and Wesleyan University, Middletown, CT.
